TWEEDSMUIR SEES R.C.A.F. GIVE DISPLAY

Governor-General Views Spectacular Flying Exhibition

By FRANK FLAHERTY

CRANFORD, Ont., Oct. 4.—Lord Tweedsmuir, governor general of Canada and commander in chief of the armed forces, inspected the Royal Canadian Air Force station here Tuesday and witnessed a spectacular flying display.

Three huge bombers, six training planes and an army co-operation machine swooped, dived and flew in formation over the air station as His Excellency looked on.

MAKES FLYING TRIP
It was a demonstration of the quality of Canada's newer planes and the skill of the pilots. His Excellency flew from Ottawa in a large air force machine, and the officers' mess with all the officers of the station, inspected the buildings, witnessed the demonstration and flew back to Ottawa, all in less than six hours.

Most formidable of the craft displayed were a number of fast bombers and a few camouflaged in dull colors. Painted in shades of green and brown, the two colors arranged in regular blotches, the machines blend into the landscape when on the ground.

In the air, the dull colors also make the machines less noticeable over distances.
The newest bombers have a speed of 280 miles an hour and an altitude maximum of 30,000 feet. They carry oxygen tanks to permit the crew six or seven hours' breathing properly at high altitudes.

ARMY LIES FLAT

Out in the glass-enclosed nose of the bombers lies the navigator with his maps before him on a small table. Behind him the bomb aimer lies on his stomach, watching the ground through a glass in the floor.
On the same level and a few feet to the rear are the bomb racks. The pilot and wireless operator occupy a cabin on a higher level, and behind the navigator and bomb aimer.

To the rear of them is another spacious compartment where other members of the crew sit as the fliers travel. At the rear sits a gunner, his weapon pointed out from the tail of the machine.
The forward guns are operated by the pilot and point out on either side of the cockpit.

EXPLAINS MACHINE

The governor-general had a long talk with Pilot Officer R. B. Reynolds of Calgary. Lord Tweedsmuir mounted the wing of Reynolds' plane and stood with his hand braced against the cockpit, as the pilot officer pointed out the work of his machine.

Trenton air station is a busy spot as the air force hastens to train fliers for defence of Canada and for participation in war overseas. Every available building in the big new barracks buildings is occupied and more buildings are in process of erection.

Squads of new recruits march about at their physical drill, the preliminary to any course of instruction in the air force trades, such as fitter, fitter, wireless operator, photographer.

THREE MACHINE TYPES

Three types of machines were prominent among those in use, small single-motored trainers, large two-motored trainers and the bombers. After training to fly in the single-motored trainers, the airmen accustom themselves to the use of larger machines in the two-motored trainers which also carry equipment for practice bombing.

All this comes before they are permitted to take control of one of the high-speed expensive bombers as fighters.
The co-operation plane which performed for the governor-general is specially valuable for observation purposes because it can travel as slow as 60 miles an hour and also at high speeds and because it can rise and descend rapidly.

OBSERVER SEES HOW CONTRABAND CONTROL WORKS

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The British information ministry had night issued an "explanatory" account of how the contraband control works in "drawing the economy net more tightly around Germany."

A British observer wrote that these searching boats have closed the North Sea to contraband vessels and none can enter that area without being searched by the British. A total of 74 ships have been examined at the Weymouth base, the report said.

"Deliberate obstruction has been almost unknown," the document said. It added the goodwill shown during the searching process and that contraband control is not a "deliberate" matter.

Ships have been delayed from six hours to two weeks. It was said the report added that "as often as not, useful reports of information should more than make up for the delay before a ship continues."

Director Resigns

CANBERRA, Oct. 4.—Resignation of Sir Harry Brown as director-general of Australian trade and telegraphs effective Dec. 1, was announced today. The resignation was attributed to personal reasons. He had held the post for 10 years.

Metropolitan Opera Will Not Let War Interfere With Program Schedule

By JOHN SELBY

Associated Press Arts Editor NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The Metropolitan opera will not yield to the clamor of isolationists in Europe, Edward Johnson, Ontario-born director of America's first opera house, asserted Tuesday.

"New York holds what the rest of the world is closed to," he declared in announcing the features of the season which begins late next month. "The Metropolitan speaks a universal language, and can take part in no war of culture or of race."

TWO GERMAN REVEALS

Therefore, Johnson explained, the winter's repertoire would not change in balance, and at least two of the five important reveals will be German.

These are Wagner's "The Flying Dutchman" for Kirsten Flagstad, and Smetana's "The Bartered Bride" for an unnamed singer. Other works, new to the repertoire will be Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro," Montemayor's "Love of Three Kings" and Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande."

Johnson also has been associated with America nearly 20 years. He is a book designer for the Wagnerian wing of the roster.

The only other foreign-born artist he announced is Ludovico Olivieri, Italian tenor whose forte is character parts.

PAN-AMERICAN MEET ADJOURNS

PANAMA, Panama, Oct. 4.—The neutrality conference of 21 American republics adjourned Tuesday after delegates adopted a program designed to insulate the western hemisphere from the conflict.

Principal feature of this program is "safety zone" for neutral shipping laid about the continent from the Maine-Canada border, around Cape Horn and north in the Pacific to the boundary between Canada and the States of Washington.

This zone is to be patrolled by the American navy—that of the United States undertaking the chief role—to keep neutral American shipping free from hindrance by belligerents.

EUROPEAN SOPRANOS

Two new soprano singers abroad have been engaged: Jarmila Novotna, Czech, already in America with her family, and 25-year-old Hilde

Reichert, Italian contraltos who will share the Lily Pons roles this winter.

Reichert is the new heroine. He is an American born in Wisconsin as "Edwin Johnson," who thought it best to change his name to avoid conflict with Edward Johnson, then singing instead of managing.

Alexander Kipnis, though born in Russia, also has been associated with America nearly 20 years. He is a book designer for the Wagnerian wing of the roster.

The only other foreign-born artist he announced is Ludovico Olivieri, Italian tenor whose forte is character parts.

Not Many Exceptions

Figures given out show that only 145 persons have been placed in preventive custody in the internment camp at Kananaskis, from the area between Winnipeg and the coast. Those interned are not necessarily guilty of sabotage or intent to sabotage. They are for one reason or another under suspicion, and will have an opportunity to gain their freedom if they can show this to be without cause.

The number, considering the extent of country and the large and mixed population, is not large. It is in fact small enough to show that with few exceptions eastern Canadians have been conducting themselves properly, and that nothing in the nature of a "purge" can be charged against the authorities.

May good sense prevail, and the number never have to be increased.

Soldiers Must Be Clothed

The war purchasing board reports a temporary shortage of wool, the visible supply having been used up already in making uniforms and blankets for our new and fast-growing army. It is believed there is enough wool in the country to meet the need for more of these things, but it has not been coming on the market. To bring it out, a price has been set about 50 per cent higher than that hitherto prevailing, and the board is appealing to the commodity to make it available.

There ought to be instant response to this appeal. Winter is coming on, and a continued shortage of wool would mean that recruiting must be slowed or that our soldiers must be improperly clothed and bedded in cold weather. Should the response not be forthcoming, it will be the duty of the Government to take other means to obtain the needed and existing supplies.

It would be curious—and not flattering to our war-time spirit of co-operation—if the "conscription of wealth" had to start with the conscription of wool for army use.

War-Time Relief

Municipal authorities are naturally not pleased with the demand from the federal and provincial Governments for full statement of the financial position of each city and town. This they think betokens a desire to hedge on the promise that the Governments would pay 80 per cent of relief costs; a supposition supported by the ruling that clothing issued to the needy is not to be counted as relief. The full expenditure to be shared by the Dominion and provincial treasuries.

It is to be assumed that this ruling applies to other provinces also. It cannot be denied that this means a heavier relief burden than the municipalities expected to have to bear. The relief of the needy is to be reduced to the municipal share of 20 per cent of relief costs was given before the war started and war costs had to be faced by the Dominion.

That, one way or another, the municipalities will have to meet a larger share of the relief expenditure than they were to meet if peace had continued, seems probable. War needs are not optional, but mandatory, and with this enormous new outlay forced upon the national treasury, less federal help in other matters may have to be accepted as part of the penalty we must pay for having such men as Hitler bossing other nations and leaving war started against other peoples.

The Baltic Area

Estonia having passed into the Soviet "orbit," Latvia was next taken in hand, with Lithuania on the waiting list. Finland has an uneasy feeling that its turn will follow, and its citizens are being drilled in defence measures.

These countries were all parts of Russia before the upheaval of 1914. They differ from Poland in that their present bounds were set at the close of the Great War, while the section of Poland recovered by the Russians in the last month was taken from Russia subsequent to the settlement. This legal difference may or may not be recognized at Moscow. The Baltic states only exist on sufferance of the Soviet, and already two of their number have been reduced to the status of virtual protectorates.

Meanwhile Nazi submarines in the Baltic are giving Stalin a good excuse to convert that sea into a "Russian lake" on the ground that Russia's security demands the exclusion from it of any power formidable enough to threaten invasion. Swedish ships are being sunk in such numbers as to suggest a desire at Berlin to pick a quarrel with that country, to be followed in due course by an attack upon it and the occupation of southern Sweden as an outpost that would put the entrance to the Baltic under Nazi control.

But that passage into the North Sea is Russia's only outlet to the Atlantic and world commerce. Stalin is fairly likely to see in this a reason why he should "beat the Fuehrer to it" and make Sweden a Russian outpost instead.

Editorial Notes

The thinking of the "Clement" may be taken as Berlin's reply to Mr. Churchill's speech declaring the enemy warships had failed to do great damage to Allied shipping in the first month of the war. If so, the speech brought one important disclosure. It is known now, as it was not known before, that a Nazi surface ship is afloat somewhere, armed and on the hunt for victims. The hunt for the hunter is also on.

Fritz Kuhn, who made the front pages a while ago by an insolent attack on the President of the United States, is languishing in a New York jail because no one will go bail for him. He is a leader in the movement for a "New Germany" from his pro-Nazi Bund. His second mistake was that he thought he could practice Goering methods without having a Gestapo to do the stealing for him and keep his victims from making trouble.

The city voters' list has reached a new all-time length, containing 54,857 names, 1,104 more than that of last year. It is doubtful if any city in Canada is showing as large a proportionate gain in population after year after year. It is quite certain that no other city is showing so large a gain in population with so small an increase in housing accommodation. When it comes to "packing them in" the sardine tin is our working model.

Mr. John I. McFarland of Calgary is reported to have said that so far as he and his Unit party are concerned there will be no political truce in Alberta. The people of Alberta, taking their cue from the party leaders at Ottawa, and knowing there will be no federal or provincial elections until some time next year, will no doubt continue to centre their attention on the urgent business of supporting and furthering the war effort of Canada, without much interest in the personal political ambitions of Mr. McFarland and his associates.

Dr. H. C. Wilson and Mrs. Wilson and George J. Kinnaird are in Calgary.

Fire was still destroying the timber up the river last night. The loss to the country by the continuing of the fire in the summer on the Upper Saskatchewan is very heavy.

Major Griebach has received authority to proceed with the erection of a new guard room in connection with the barracks at Fort Saskatchewan.

Madrid: The chief cities of Spain are under martial law. The Government has ordered the army to go to the front of the movement at the execution of Professor Ferrer.

A C.N.R. party of 20 persons left the city today to join the coast and rail way to the coast, and the race between the new transcontinental to connect the capital of Alberta with the Pacific is on.

The Passing Show

By J. A. COWPER

It didn't require the publication of any Blue Book to convince free-thinking people that Hitler is a historic misadventure. He is a man who is to satisfy his own ego-mania. But just as I have found it interesting a week after publication to read the documents at leisure, so in a deeper sense of gratitude, historians of the future will prize the volume of the future to get an intimate picture of the Austrian house-painter with the cockle style of hair-dressing, who by the force of a single idea, and under the pressure of an intense megalomania, rose to be head of the Reich. The ideal of his party, the idea of Jews and people of the smaller nations, he will be studied as the man who at the end of a series of marvellous triumphs of bluff, riddle and guile to gain a few square miles of Polish corridor.

BLUE BOOK ON THE WAR

What the end will be no man can, at this stage, say. I feel no hazard in venturing a prediction that the end will see Russia and Germany—the present allies—warring over the Polish spoils and the Russian obstacle to the "Drang nach Osten"—the planned march to the East.

We grow so accustomed to reading news and histories to stilled, courteous language between diplomats that one learns with surprise of the table-pounding and shrieking of threats when Sir Neville Henderson, Britain's ambassador at Berlin, interviewed Hitler, Goering, von Ribbentrop and Weizsaecker. Some of Sir Neville's reports to his chief, Lord Halifax, on Hitler's manner, bring in interviews read more like an alienist's report on an abnormal patient, than of the head of a State facing war.

Of his first interview with Hitler, Sir Neville reports that the Fuehrer was "excitable and uncompromising," and his language "violent and exaggerated."

On the second occasion he was "quite calm and never raised his voice once." The third time he was "absolutely calm and normal," and he was "excited once," when he was told that Britain would resist force by force. His excuse was that he had to satisfy the demands of his people. The fifth and last interview was, says Sir Neville, "of a stormy character."

It was at the third interview when he was "absolutely calm and normal" and only became excited once, that Hitler showed a significant fact to his guest. Says Sir Neville, "Hitler stated that the war was being fought for the sake of the German people, and the Polish question was settled he would end his life as an artist."

He called himself a "victim of infinite frustration" and promised to be good for ever, provided by the artist's spirit of child who alternately cajoles and flies into tantrums in order to get his own way.

All Blue Books read like dull compilations of statistics and civil service jargon. This Blue Book is meaner than any history, more thrilling than any detective story. It is filled with the words of the protagonists, against the background of the firm, suave and courteous British ambassador, making it unpleasantly obvious that the Nazi chiefs that his country had pledged its word to Poland and would fulfil its pledge to the utmost should force be used against Germany's armaments.

One must question the Blue Book itself. Many people believed that Hitler was the tool of a Nazi "brain trust" that controlled the German order. The dispatches of Sir Neville Henderson make it clear that Hitler makes his own decisions and wishes absolute power.

A TIP TO TRAVELLERS

Just now, how about these, taken from the recent advertisements of a London paper of August 21, "Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung," "Imperial," "Exotic World," "Kolonie," "Schweizerhof," "Hof," "Haus," "Intern," etc.

Or, if you'd like a quiet spot in the war zone, here is a list of places to visit.

"Warsaw. Hotel Bristol. 250 rooms. Every modern comfort. Garage. Restaurant. Dancing."

"Moscow. Grand Hotel. Continental. Where everybody feels at home. Quiet location."

Fifty years ago today I was present at the termination of one of the most interesting criminal trials in my experience. It was the trial of Adolf Morrison, the "Mollie" of Megantic, as he was called. Born in the wilds of that rocky country in the Eastern Townships, he had gone west in his youth, to make a fair share of money to his parents. He found that they had been cheated out of the old homestead by some legal chicanery and that it was occupied by a French-Canadian. The Scot was naturally angry and swore that he "would go revenge." Soon afterwards the town was burned down and Donald was accused with the arson. He denied it, but when a warrant was issued for his arrest, he fled into the bush, where sympathizers kept him informed of the movements of the police and gave him food.

One day Morrison roamed into a village, having been told that it was a safe place. He had engaged a French-Canadian gunman from Maine to "get Morrison," and there was a fight which slain was killed. It was a fair fight, but Donald was charged with murder.

For months he evaded capture, despite the pursuit of special constables and the aid from Quebec. Finally he was captured by a trooper in Sherbrooke jail, convicted on Oct. 4, 1889, of manslaughter and sentenced to a term in jail.

Proprietor of mountain hotel (the newly arrived guests) this is your rest, sir. If you want a fine view over the mountains, put a dime in the slot and the shutters open for five minutes.

Exhausted Spain

For Spain in her present condition to seek unity and recovery in a foreign power would be as disastrous as for a man exhausted by fever to plunge into a cold bath. The Civil War has left behind it disorganized industry, defective machinery, a serious lack of raw materials, broken bridges and unrepaired roads, refugees, concentration camps, banditry, and personal vendettas—say nothing of a most drastic economic depression. Only time and toll and growing confidence can remove this accumulation of evils. The distress has been greatest in Catalonia, where the population was of course mainly anti-Nationalist and where the highly developed industries were first to suffer in war.—The Times (London).

No Surrender

Comes still another peace offensive. Not even in Berlin and Moscow will there be doubt as to what the Allies' reply will be. The very tone of the proposal, not to mention the unholy alliance that sponsors it, dictates this. For Britain and France to be a party to such a proposition would be equivalent to complicity in the gutting of Poland. Worse, it would be surrender before force, the desertion of the very principles for which they have been fighting.

The British and French peoples did not take up arms simply to save Poland. There was then talk of our being able to give up the fight, the tragic destruction of that nation. We are fighting to restore Poland, to resurrect Czechoslovakia, yes. But these things are merely terms in our peace. What we first try to get up the fight against aggression before they tell, to destroy those craven despots which have revived force on the international scene, and to bring about the re-establishment of international law, and the sanctity of the pledged word—and the fundamental code of human decency.

The impossibility of the peace of the dictators is implicit in the terms they make. Bailed down by their own hands, they give up the fight against aggression because the immediate objectives of their aggression have been achieved. Hence, they have suggested that the joint in the establishment of a new order in Europe, which must, it is to have any meaning at all, be erected on mutual respect for the pledged word. From men whose regimes are sustained by murder, arson, lying, cheating and chicanery, regimes for which a treaty has less meaning than last year's catalogue.

The moral issues apart, such a peace would be nothing short of international suicide. Peace on these terms would mean but one thing: the total destruction of democracy. Even while proposing peace the Kremlin is imposing communism on helpless little Estonia by force. Britain and France to give up the fight would simply free the dictators for the more rapid execution of every independent State left in Central and Southeastern Europe. It would be only a matter of time until they, too, faced the ultimatum under the threat of still greater forces than face them today.—Toronto Globe and Mail.

A Year After Munich

Twelve months ago this was the mirror of the world as it was just beginning to take stock of what really had been accomplished in the ancient Bavarian city. Mr. Chamberlain had returned to London, and had every right to believe was a document that would guarantee "peace in our time." True, it was bought from a madman at a price which Czechoslovakia had been induced to pay. It remained that peace of a sort was permitted to prevail for the time being.

But the Munich pact was just beginning to take stock of what really had been accomplished in the ancient Bavarian city. True, it was bought from a madman at a price which Czechoslovakia had been induced to pay. It remained that peace of a sort was permitted to prevail for the time being.

We, the German Fuehrer and Chancellor, and the British Prime Minister, have had further meetings today and are agreed in recognizing that the question of Anglo-German relations is of the first importance for the two countries and for Europe.

"We regard the agreement signed last night and the Anglo-German declaration of intent as symbolic of the desire of our two peoples never to go to war with one another again."

We are resolved that the method of consultation shall be the method adopted to deal with any other question that may concern our two countries, and we are determined to continue our efforts to remove possible sources of difference and thus to contribute to the assurance of peace in Europe.

September 30, 1939. Prime Minister Chamberlain and Premier Daladier once again held up for blackmail. This time the German Fuehrer, under the name of "peace," had the support of the British Prime Minister, and the British Prime Minister and the Nazi chief. Here it is.

Religion Day By Day

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS

"In the days of our first, I had a horror of him," and our first. "They found me in the street, and I was never quite sure the car could master them. But after we got on a hill it seemed to level out."

"That's the way our troubles: they look so formidable from a distance, and we worry and fear; but when we really reach them they seem to flatten out. The worst of our troubles is that we are afraid of them. It is day-by-day bread for which we are hidden by prayer."

"A day at a time—this is a wholesome rhyme. A good time to live by, a day at a time."

"That we may have daily strength for daily needs, and that we may not burden today with fears for tomorrow, is our prayer, O unfailing Father, Amen."

Read Psalm 21:24.

"I'm sorry, Mother, but the forerunners says the painter's time is up and they must leave, or he'll have to charge overtime."

One Man Responsible

Editor, Bulletin: Today, in sorrow, I am thinking of the awful destruction of life and property and the terrible suffering of men, women and children in the wars across the sea, both in Europe and in Asia. In Europe one man and one man alone is responsible. Up to the last moment it was in the hands of Adolf Hitler to say whether it was to be peace or war. Had he decided the fate of President Roosevelt or the message of the British and French governments, it could have been avoided. Poland answered the plea and agreed to arbitration and the war was over, but Hitler wanted war and made his moves accordingly. Now that he has brought it about, he must stand for it and not the right-thinking countries of the world will combine to fight against Hitler and all that it stands for. There must be no giving way. Right, the end, must triumph. Generosity, mercy, justice and freedom must again be made to triumph. Hitler must be made to impose his inhuman rule for power on the world, rule men and countries of their lives and property. While Hitler lives there can be no peace and no freedom. MERRY ANDREWS, Shining Bank, Alberta.

Your Health—By Dr. Frank McCoy

Hardening of the arteries is a more or less natural change attendant on age, being found not only in man but in all animals having a backbone.

The artery which has stood up under the wear and tear of many years of life apparently has some natural tendency to thicken and harden, losing its youthful elasticity in the process. By itself, arteriosclerosis would not be a serious matter, unless it led to the arteries, only very seldom kills.

When accompanied by persistent high blood pressure, the hardening of the arteries is a serious matter. It is usually self-corrective, but if it is not, it will lead to a fatal result. In other words, there is yet room for hope. The patient who is the victim of the arteries and who has a high blood pressure, a serious condition, will be able to take proper care of himself.

COUNTERFEIT ARTISTS GET 5-YEAR TERM

City Youths Sentenced On Bad Money Charge, Petty Crimes

A series of convictions for petty crimes led to five-year penal sentences for Jack Abbott, James Conroy and John Stankiewicz on charges of conspiracy to utter, uttering and being in possession of counterfeit fifty-cent pieces. The sentence was imposed by Mr. Justice W. C. P. in supreme court Wednesday.

Paying sentence, Mr. Justice P. said there was no appeal to the guilt of the three accused. There was no association between Abbott and Stankiewicz in the attempt to pass the coins in South Edmonton on July 18 last, while there was evidence that Conroy acted as go-between in the same case of the coins to a R.C.M.P. officer.

CONVICTED BEFORE

J. W. McClung, K.C., crown prosecutor, submitted the evidence of the three accused which showed they had been previously convicted a number of times on money charges. When arrested the accused had in their possession $2.50 in counterfeit and a search of their cache by R.C.M.P. and city police officers revealed 75 other counterfeit coins.

AT SUMMER FAIR

The three men were operating here during the summer fair, it being their intention, the evidence would indicate, to utilize the last money on the summer fair circuit. Attention to the passing of the counterfeit coins was drawn by telephone messages to post office merchants that two young men had come to pass their counterfeit money. They gave description of the men which resulted in the apprehension of Abbott and Stankiewicz. Const. George Bluck, who made the arrest, told the court that while being brought to the police station Stankiewicz was observed dropping coins on the grass. Search later disclosed he had thrown away five coins, a sixth was found in his possession.

$60 FOR $20

Const. G. B. Harrison, R.C.M.P., told of contacting Const. J. L. Exhibition ground and intimating that he was ready to purchase $60 worth of the bad money. He was to receive $60 worth for the $20, he said.

Conroy took him to a downtown restaurant but did not contact the man with the supply. Search later was arranged for a point on the C.N.R. tracks between 91 and 92 streets. Conroy, Abbott and Stankiewicz attended this meeting and a deal was in progress when other police officers arrived and arrested the three counterfeiters. They came from a signal from Harrison.

Det.-Corpl. F. H. Russell, R.C.M.P., placed a statement from Stankiewicz in evidence in which he accused a man in a program when other police officers arrived and arrested the three counterfeiters. They came from a signal from Harrison.

Grayston, McSparran Hit Fast Clip in Gym Drills

ROADWORK in the early morning hours, a business-like grind in the gym on Tuesday and another one planned for today with tapering off exercises billed for Thursday, will put both Eddie McSparran and Gordon Grayston in the pink of condition and ready for their 10 three-minute rounds of main event fighting at the Memorial Hall Friday night.

It is a times when the training is so intense that the fighters are almost exhausted by the time they get to the ring for the main event.

Grayston, Thompson's tapering off exercises will conclude one of his business sessions in the gym. Gordon was in top condition even before his training started, in fact he is seldom out of trim, but his steady workouts will end one of his most arduous efforts in trying to top up the power in his punches.

Gordon showed much more ring in his punches in his last fight. He has added to that power during these last two weeks.

Arnold Janzen will feature the preliminary fighting. Janzen has an impressive string of victories attached to his record and for Friday the Canadian Legion has selected new and better talent for the Edmonton pugilist, Janzen.

Janzen will be pitted against Mickey McGill. Negotiations have not been completed between these two fighters but a definite announcement is expected late today.

In a special feature, Gordon Grayston will meet Paul Krause of Greenwald, while the other will bring together Johnny Keiser of

The Canadian Legion will award a silver medal to the best boxer of the night and bouts start at 9 p.m.

Torpedo Is Once Again Germany's Favorite Sea Weapon

In 1917 Germany had reached the high-point of her unrestricted submarine warfare, in which ships, neutral and allied, were sunk without warning. Such a ship was the French liner Sontay, top, shown in this spectacular picture as she went to the bottom. Passengers and crew members are jumping into the sea. A member of the crew of the U-boat made this spectacular picture, bottom, showing bow of a German submarine in foreground as the underwater raider stood by her victim, an allied freighter, as it went down by the stern after the explosion of the time bombs played on board by the submarine's crew. The U-boats did not waste torpedoes whenever it could be avoided.

Off on its voyage of destruction, a torpedo is shown here shortly after it had been fired. This was the weapon with which Germany attacked allied and neutral shipping in the first world war. The vigilance and efficiency of the British and French navies has greatly reduced the menace of the German U-boats in the current hostilities.

India, With Cash And Men, Proves Loyalty to Empire

If Germany Counts on Wartime Trouble to Separate Great Empire it Reckons With Failure—Detachments of Great Fighting Units Now on Duty at Outlying Posts.

By MILTON BRONNER
Bulletin Foreign Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Oct. 4.—If Germany has counted upon war-time trouble for Britain in the great empire of India, it has been badly mistaken so far.

Gurkhas, Sikhs and others of the Indian fighting races, for many decades among the best soldiers in the world, have been quietly shifted to important outlying posts of the British Empire. They are expected to give valuable account of themselves, as they did in the first World War. Even more significant is the feeling in India itself. Practically every important Indian prince, reigning over native states and suzerains of Typical Sikh troops . . . soldiers of the British Empire . . . highly trained and conspicuous for their bravery in action.

King-Emperor George VI. has placed soldiers and money at the disposal of the Empire. One of them, the Maharajah of Kapurthala, has, in addition, offered the services of two of his soldier sons, both of whom were educated in England.

The Aga Khan, head of a Moslem sect which numbers millions of followers, has come forward, as he did in the last war. He has asked all his followers to give their unflinching services to the Empire. He has also placed himself at the disposal of the government in any capacity which may be useful, just as he did in 1914.

WHAT is going on in immense India is matched by what is happening in "Little India"—made up of some 2,000 Indian students scattered in universities throughout Great Britain. About half of these live, for the time being, in London.

The Indian Student Hostel in London is a sort of small edition of India itself. Here one can find representatives of all the races and religions of India. Here the common language is English. Many of them who are medical students have volunteered for hospital work. Many others have enrolled in the Air Raid Precaution and other home front services.

In doing this they are following an example set by the great Mahatma Gandhi himself over 40 years ago. Gandhi, then a young lawyer, helping the cause of his countrymen in South Africa, forged all about the law and Indian grievances when the Boer War broke out. He joined a British ambulance corps and served until the British had won.

Life or Death? Woman Sniper On Trial

Sitting in judgment on an accused woman sniper, this German court martial, according to German censors, seeks to determine whether Bala Gelblung is a soldier or a civilian sniper. Death is the penalty for civilian snipers, imprisonment for soldiers. The woman's uniform may indicate she was serving with the Polish army.

Digging In On Home Front

The grim reality of this London residential street becomes a casualty of war as local residents and other volunteers, including women, dig up the pavement to build air raid trenches. Air raid defense has been expedited since war was declared.

No Shortage Of Food In Britain

Illustrative of the fact that supplies from the Empire are reaching England, this picture passed by the British censor, shows a scene at a London market during the second year of the war, indicating that England has a plentiful supply of foodstuffs.

Tommies Are Cheerful

While a corporal on hended knee strums out a tune, these British Tommies pose cheerfully as they are entrained at London for a secret embarkation point on the English coast, for France and the western front. In this picture radiated from London, the next messages to Hitler are plainly shown on the door and side of the railway carriage, and the troops seem determined to see that they are "delivered."

All Aboard For Germany

With the value of mechanized equipment in modern warfare proved in Poland, France rushes more tanks to the western front. Headed for battle, these rolling forts are being loaded on railway flatcars "somewhere in France."

Sub Victim Thanks Aerial Rescuers

Captain Schufeldt, right, skipper of the torpedoed British freighter Kensington Court, is shown here as he expressed his gratitude to the two British Royal Air Force pilots who rescued him and his crew of 33 after their ship had been sunk off the English coast. The fliers brought their flying boats down on the sea and picked up the crew. Names of the officers were withheld by the British censor. This was the first case of an aerial rescue in the war.
